POF Patriot Genesis		Carbine or rifle	7,62 mm NATO (7,62x51, .308 Winchester), The rifle is based on the traditional Remington 700 BDL Action. It had a black/OD/grey marble colored McMillan A1 stock that was glass bedded. It had a 5.5 Contour Broughton's barrel. The crown of the barrel is worth noting, it is a deeply recessed 11-degree crown that is done by Patriot Arms. The trigger is a Remington factory trigger that has been reworked by Patriot Arms. On this test rifle the trigger was set to 1 (one) pound 12 ounces. While it was exceptionally set, it was way too light for tactical work. Australia - Angel Bill	Angel M 80	Rifle	7,62 mm NATO (7,62x51. .308 Winchester),	The Angel M80 Rifle is a 7.62 x 51 mm single shot target rifle designed and made in New South Wales in Australia by Bill Angel in the 1980s. The Angel action was one of the first solid cylindrical type target actions (described as 'rigid massive') made in that country. It followed the success of the Swing design in the UK which saw the move away from 'open' designs; often derived from 19th Century military actions. It was approved for use in Australia on the 1st November 1980. The rifle is no longer in production. Australia - Lithgow Arsenal	Lithgow Target (SAF Target)	Carbine	7,62 mm NATO (7,62x51. .308 Winchester) The National Rifle Association was looking for a new competition rifle that took the 7.62mm NATO round. The Lithgow Factory set about producing a suitable weapon. A single shot 7.62mm target rifle based on the then current L1A1 Service rifle was produced. It was made exclusively at Lithgow SAF and had an adapter plate for a Central aperture sight fitted as standard. Originally designated the 'SAF Target Rifle 7.62mm', the word 'Lithgow' was added to the name in 1969. This shotgun has a small rifle barrel „hidden“ in the rib, for hunters who appreciate the special advantage of having an almost invisible, additional rifle caliber on hand – for an accurate shot at longer distances. The rifle barrel is hardly noticeable because it is set deep in the rib, as a caliber we have picked the .22Hornet here as the smallest yet powerful centerfire cartridge. Austria - Steyr	Kropatschek 1881 Gendarmerie	Rifle	11,15x42R - 11,45x58 R inspired by the German Mauser M1871, using the bolt rib to lock against the receiver, and had a Vetterli-type tube magazine in the fore-end. The cartridge carrier mechanism was similar to the Fruwirth M1872. The striker was designed with an intregal cocking piece and eliminated the separate hammer of the Fruwirth. The increased mass of the bolt guide closed against the split receiver bridge. This made the action substantially stronger than the earlier Fruwirth was. Austria - Steyr Mannlicher	Steyr - Mannlicher 1895	Rifle	8x56 R Solothurn (8 mm Austrian Mannlicher Steyr, Hungarian Mannlicher, Bulgarian Mannlicher) The M1895 is unusual in employing a straight-pull bolt action, as opposed to the more common rotating bolt-handle of other rifles. It consequently renowned for combining a high rate of fire (around 35 rounds per minute) with reliability and sturdiness, although this requires decent care and maintenance with an extractor that is vulnerable to breakage due to a lack of primary extraction. The M1895 was originally chambered in the 8x50mmR Mannlicher cartridge. Austria - Steyr Mannlicher	Steyr - Mannlicher 1895 (Short Rifle, M 95)	Carbine	8 mm Hungarian Mannlicher (8x56 R, Mannlicher- Schoenauer) Mannlicher developed developed the famous Mannlicher block clip, which was inserted into the box magazine from the top, and automatically ejected through the opening at the bottom of the magazine as the last round was chambered. This significantly speed up the loading process, compared to the earlier designs with magazines loaded by single rounds; the problem was that such magazine could not be loaded with loose rounds without the clip. Austria - Steyr Mannlicher	Steyr - Mannlicher M 1890/30	Carbine	8x56 R Solothurn (8 mm Austrian Mannlicher, Hungarian Mannlicher, Bulgarian Mannlicher) In 1930 the Austrian Army adopted a rimmed 8x56mm cartridge to replace the old Austro-Hungarian 8x50mm design. The new round, known as the M.30 in Austria, was initially used in modified M1890 and M1895-type Mannlichers. These were essentially similar to the Austro-Hungarian patterns, but were re-barreled or re-chambered for the 8x56r cartridge and had new back sights installed. Austria - Steyr Mannlicher	Steyr - Mannlicher M 1895/30 (95/30)	Carbine	8x56 R Solothurn (8 mm Austrian Mannlicher Steyr, Hungarian Mannlicher, Bulgarian Mannlicher) The M1895 is unusual in employing a straight-pull bolt action, as opposed to the more common rotating bolt-handle of other rifles. It consequently renowned for combining a high rate of fire (around 35 rounds per minute) with reliability and sturdiness, although this requires decent care and maintenance with an extractor that is vulnerable to breakage due to a lack of primary extraction. Austria - Steyr, FEG - Hungary	Steyr - Mannlicher 1885 (Straight Pull)	Rifle	11x58 R Werndl (11 mm Werndl Rifle M 1877, Mannlicher) The Mannlicher Model 1885 has a straight-pull non-rotating bolt, which is locked by a block pivoted from the underside of the rear section of the bolt. This block abuts against a shoulder in the receiver when in the locked position. This Model 1885 introduced the Mannlicher magazine system in which the clip is inserted into the magazine of the rifle and functions as a part of the magazine - as does the clip of the later U.S. M1 rifle. Belgium - Browning (FN Herstal)	Browning X-Bolt Pro	Carbine	6,5 mm Creedmoor (6,5x55. 6,5-284) Browning is delving into semi-custom rifle production with the new X-Bolt Pro. What classifies the X-Bolt Pro as a "semi-custom rifle" is the level of specialized finishing touches and higher end construction above the already top-tier X-Bolt family of hunting rifles. First, the X-Bolt Pro features a true carbon fiber stock, making it extremely lightweight and rigid. The stock is filled with a noise-dampening foam. Despite being originally designed for use with black powder, the action was strong enough to make the jump to smokeless powder with only minor modifications, and was subsequently chambered in the smokeless .33 WCF cartridge beginning in 1903. Canada - Cooley Machine & Arms	Cooley M 71 (M 710) (Winchester Western Cooley)	Carbine	.225 Winchester Magnum, .243 Winchester, .30-06 Springfield, .308 Winchester The Cooley Model 71, sometimes known as the Winchester Western Cooley 71 was a Canadian-made bolt action rifle produced in Cobourg, Ontario by the former HW Cooley Machine and Arms Company after it was bought out by Olin in 1961. This design is VERY close to the Winchester Model 70 (which it's based on), but with the safety on the side instead of on the bolt. Like the Winchester 70, it uses a push feed rather than controlled round feed in its action. Four-digit serial numbers are not uncommon. Canada - Long Branch	Long-Branch ROSS 1905 Mk II Canadian	Rifle	.303 British (7,7x56 R, Lee-Enfield Mk. 7), .303 Ross. Sir Charles Ross developed his own pattern of the straight pull rifles, broadly based on Austrian Mannlicher M1890 / 1895 system. British and Canadian forces tested Ross rifles circa 1900-1901, but these rifles, while being quite fast in action, completely failed the reliability tests. In 1907, Ross introduced a slightly improved Mark II rifle. Between 1907 and 1912, Ross turned out several star-marked modifications of the basic mark II pattern, which differed in barrel lengths, safety arrangements and other such minor modifications	C1	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> <input type="checkbox"/> <input type="checkbox"/> <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Canada - Peabody	Peabody South Carolina Militia	Carbine	.50 Musket Government (12,7x45 R. .50-70 Musket CF, Sharps), .50-60 Peabody (.50/60) Basic design was based upon a pivoting breechblock, the front of which pivoted down on a transverse pin fixed through both the upper rear of the breechblock and the upper rear of the box-like receiver. As the breechblock was lowered, it exposed the barrel chamber and permitted the insertion of a cartridge. The rifle was fired by means of a musket-style outside hammer whose lockwork was inletted into the buttstock behind the receiver. Czech Republic - CZ Ceska Zbrojovka, CZ- USA	CZ 455 Tacticool Suppressor Ready	Carbine	.22 LR (5,6x15 R. .22 lfb) Though the Tacticool came out to rave reviews last year, we knew we could do one better. The new Tacticool Suppressor-Ready sports a 16.5" varmint barrel with 1/2x28 threads. This makes adding a suppressor easy as can be and eliminates excess barrel length. The shorter barrel gives plenty of time for the cartridge to get a full burn while increasing the rigidity of the barrel, resulting in a rifle that drives tacks. Czech Republic - CZ Ceska Zbrojovka, CZ- USA	CZ 455 Training	Rifle	.22 LR (5,6x15 R. .22 lfb) Training Rifle has finally made it to the 455 platform. Chambered in .22 LR, the 455 Training Rifle shares the same popular features of its predecessor – it has the same 24.8” barrel, tangent rear sight (adjustable for distance) and beechwood stock with Schnabel forend. The biggest difference is the ability to swap the barrel and/or stock, traits that all our 455s possess. Czechoslovakia	Vz32 Peruvian Short Rifle (VZ 1932)	Carbine	7,65x53 Mauser (7,65 mm Argentine, Belgian, Turkish, 7,8x53 Czech) The Czechoslovak-made Vz.32 (only made for Peru) is sort of the 'prototype" rifle on which the Model 1935 short rifle is based. Made about 1932 by ZB in Czechoslovakia for Peru. 2,000 were also made for Uruguay. This is a small ring Mauser reminiscent of the Kar98a carbine. It is supposed to be a lightened version of the VZ24. Parts different from the VZ24 are: stock, handguard, both bands, receiver, charger guide, sight guard, bolt handle, safety (reversed), trigger guard, rear swivel, and buttplate. Denmark - Schultz & Larsen	Schultz & Larsen M 1942 Police Carbine (m/42)	Rifle	8x58 R Krag- Jorgensen (R Danish M 1889. 8 mm Norwegian Remington, Swedish Remington) This weapon is perhaps more interesting for its history than its design. This rifle was designed for use by the Danish police, and was produced for only a few months in 1942 and 1943. Only a few hundred were built, not because of bad design or anything like that, but because of persistent Nazi sabotage of the factory. Design-wise, it is a conventional bolt-action rifle, with a pistol-grip-wrist stock and a stock that ran to the muzzle of the rifle. It was a strong design, able to take a lot of abuse. Denmark - Schultz & Larsen	Schultz & Larsen M 61 Target	Rifle	.22 LR (5,6x15 R. .22 lfb) The M61 is a direct descendant of Niels Larsen's M45, M46, M47, M49 series of .22 rimfire free rifles. Production began around 1959 and probably continued until 1970. They are still listed in the 1968 and 1969 brochures and catalogs. Total production numbers are unknown and it is difficult to speculate on. Denmark - Schultz & Larsen	Schultz & Larsen RPLT42 (42 RPLT)	Rifle	8x58 R Krag- Jorgensen (R Danish M 1889. 8 mm Norwegian Remington, Swedish Remington) The Model 42 is a 4 lug rear locker based on the S&L Model 38. Otterup made 1200 rifles model RPLT 42 to the danish coastguard in 1942. The last shipment from the factory is said to have been stolen by the Danish Resistance and the German Occupation authorities pitched a royal fit about that, confiscating all of S&L's raw material, forbidding rifle and rifle ammunition production, and clamping down hard on the Danish police and any remaining Danish military. Just adding a new part to old Russian rear sight like with M/28 rifle, had proved less than best possible solution. Adjusting the rear sight of M/28 to exact distance setting was not easy and the whole rear sight proved too vulnerable. So was developed an improved back sight This new rear sight became standard for M/28-30 rifle. This rifle has 12.5" length of pull creating ideal ergonomics to shooters that can't get the right posture with longer size stock. For younger shooters the ability to adjust the length of pull to adult size gives a great value to this product. The calibers chosen are milder in recoil, easy to control and therefore great for practice, all the way up to serious hunting. Germany - Anschutz	Anschutz Mod. 1417	Rifle	.22 LR (5,6x15 .22 lfb) The action is a bolt action with cam cocking system, claw extractor and additional cartridge holder and ejector. An 11 mm grooved receiver drilled and tapped for scope mounts makes it possible to attach a telescopic sight. A lateral sliding safety blocks the trigger. The rifle can be loaded and unloaded in the "safe" position. The bolt face is recessed for full cartridge head support. An additional gas escape groove guarantees safety. In 1990, after 8 successful years, it was decided that due to the extremely complicated production and therefore high price, the model would no longer be manufactured. The gun is built around a falling block action that's similar in style to the action on a BSA Martini rifle. In a falling block action, a lever under the action body is pivoted forward, causing the large breechblock to slide vertically downward in grooves machined into the interior sides of the receiver. An elongated trigger guard and tasteful engraving give this rifle an elegant look. Geco Mauser "Deutsche Sportmodell" Training DSM34 (DSM-34)	Rifle	.22 LR (5,6x15 .22 lfb), This miniature calibre Mauser rifle became known as the DSM-34, by virtue of the " Deutsche Sportmodell" designation and the 1934 year of introduction. At the end of the War in 1945, the French Government took over the Mauser factories and these training rifles were still in production for a short while. Before long, all the tooling was removed to France along with all the factory stocked parts as yet unassembled. The rifles were built up in France in the MAS factory, and bore the MAS name thereafter. The fore-end tip is the head of a bald head eagle, the national emblem of the USA, crafted elaborately by hand in mammoth ivory by master engraver Ralph Salzmann. The piercing eyes and pointed beak are focussed on its prey. The fine Alpine stock connected to the ivory head has a carving that depicts the feathers of the majestic bird of prey. The grade 7 wood stock, incorporating a fluted barrel, captivates with its distinctive "tiger stripes" that also depict the feathers of the bird. Germany - Mauser Werke	Mauser M 03 Arctic	Rifle	.375 H&H Belted Magnum (9,5x72. .375 Belted Rimless Magnum H&H) Mauser's M 03 Arctic is breathtaking to behold. The mammoth ivory embodies the bitter cold of the polar region while simultaneously firing the enthusiasm of every true huntsman. Fine scrimshaw engravings resemble ancient Inuit artwork. The ivory tableaux are framed in intricately engraved steel settings. The combination of steel and ivory with a dark grade-nine curl wood stock creates a striking composition. Germany - Mauser Werke	Panzerbuchse PzB38	Anti-tank rifle	7,92x94 Panzerbuchse (German Ant-Tank. 7,9 mm Patrone 318) The PzB-38 antitank rifle is a single shot, manually loaded rifle. It uses vertically sliding breechblock, which is dropped down to open the barrel for reloading, and then rose up for locking before fire. The barrel and breech are allowed to recoil against the buffer in the stock. This recoil movement helps to decrease peak recoil which is felt by the shooter. It is also used to drop the breechblock automatically and eject the spent case.
